From Father Kasel

Praised be Jesus Christ through Mary!

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ Jesus,

Our Church teaches that the first and primary responsibility for teaching our Catholic Faith to children is entrusted to parents. The decisions of parents regarding the practice of our Catholic Faith is the single best indicator of whether or not their children will practice our Catholic Faith in the future. As we have just begun our new Faith Formation year for the children in our parishes, let us remember the serious importance of parents being responsible for their role in teaching our Catholic Faith and through their decisions and personal example. Here is a great article from the September 28, 2017 issue of The Catholic Spirit that offers practical suggestions for families.

The Church, young people and the role of parents - By Bishop Andrew Cozzens

"As Catholics, we have to be alarmed by statistics that show how many of our young people are leaving the Church. Researchers say that now fully half of our young people leave the Church after high school, and some say that only 7 percent of millennials raised Catholic still actively practice their Faith today — meaning they'll attend weekly Mass, pray a few times each week, and say their Faith is "extremely" or "very" important. We are in danger of losing a generation of Catholics.

There are many reasons that people point to for explaining this sad truth, but there is also important research that points to the solution. Christian Smith of the University of Notre Dame has been studying this question for years, and his studies point to one clear factor that statistically determines whether or not young people will stay in the Church when they become adults: parents. The single greatest predictor of whether or not young people will practice the Faith when they enter adulthood is the degree of religious commitment of their parents.

The results of his various studies are dramatic. His studies show that it was not enough for parents simply to practice their faith, and much less to practice it intermittently. Young people who stay in the Church say that their family regularly talked about religious topics in the home, that Faith was "very important" to their family, and that they themselves were regularly involved in religious activities. These parents saw their own Faith not as something they occasionally did, but who they were. It used to be the case that it was enough to bring your children to the Catholic school or religious education program for them to begin to receive the Catholic Faith. Today there are many more challenges to being a believer, since the culture young people encounter does not see the world from a Christian perspective. Studies show that unless parents have created a Catholic culture in the home, the children will succumb to our society's non-Christian way of seeing the world when they become adults. The parish, the school and the youth program are all helpful, but parental religious influence is the condition of possibility for other influences.

This means that parents must be able themselves to witness to the importance of their personal relationship with Jesus and why they choose to follow Church teachings. It also means they must be intentional about handing on this Faith, not just taking the children to Mass every Sunday, but speaking about the Faith at home, praying together as a family and giving credible witness to a Catholic worldview. The good news is that if they do this, the chances of their children practicing the Faith when they grow up are about 90 percent. The bad news is that if they don't do this, the chances of their children practicing the faith when they grow up are about 20-30 percent.

Smith and his fellow scholar Justin Bartkus give examples of ways families are successful in handing on the Faith. They locate four essential aspects:

1. Successful parents are able to give their own narrative about why their Faith is important to them - "the why."
2. They are intentional about establishing a religious culture in the household and eschew autopilot in order to achieve these aims - "the how."
3. They give good content, meaning that they expose their children to religiously significant practices, relationships and experiences- "the what."
4. They help their children to interpret the world through the eyes of our Faith. Thus, children are not simply exposed to religious content but begin to understand its central significance in their parents' lives and (cont. on pg. 4)

National Vocation Awareness Week, celebrated November 3-9, 2019, is an annual week-long celebration of the Catholic Church in the United States dedicated to promote vocations to the priesthood, diaconate and consecrated life through prayer and education, and to renew our prayers and support for those who are considering one of these particular vocations. NVAW began in 1976 when the U. S. bishops designated the 28th Sunday of the year for NVAW. In 1997, this celebration was moved to coincide with the Feast of the Baptism of the Lord, which falls on January 13 in 2013. Beginning in 2014, NVAW was moved to the first full week of November.

NEWS FROM SAINT MICHAEL AND SAINT PAUL

(from pg. 1) in their lives. The Catholic Faith becomes a profound reality that daily shapes a household and the lens through which we interpret the events of our lives. Smith and Bartkus also point out ways parents fail in faith transmission. Gaps in the consistency of religious practice are deadly to handing on this worldview. They give today's ubiquitous example: If you don't go to Mass on the days you have a sporting event, you have taught your children that sports are more important than Mass. Thus, when society challenges the importance of religious belief at all as they grow, they will know it is a matter of convenience, not deep belief. Smith and Bartkus are clear: "Even very slight inconsistencies or inauthenticities in a parent's conviction that Catholicism is true and necessary and indispensable to family life can undercut children's perception of the viability of Catholicism as a worthwhile commitment." They point out that the essential work of the parents cannot be outsourced. If they send their children to a Catholic school, but don't bring them to Mass on Sunday, chances are 70-80 percent that the children will end up not practicing their Faith at all. The challenge of passing on the Faith to the next generation has gotten more difficult in our age. But this challenge actually brings us back to the heart of the Gospel. When reading the Gospel, we find many ways that Jesus calls us to place Him first, loving Him and serving Him in our daily lives. He commands us to "love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your strength, and with all your mind; and your neighbor as yourself" (Lk 10:27). If we do these things intentionally with our children, they too will grow up desiring to love and serve Him." (Catholic Spirit, September 28, 2017) Through the intercession of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, St. Joseph, St. Paul and St. Michael, may the Infinite Mercy of Our Lord Jesus come upon our families, parishes, the whole Church and entire world! In Christ through Mary, Fr. Kasel

Plenary Indulgence for Souls in Purgatory – November 1-8

Dear Parishioners, According to the Enchiridion of Indulgences of the Catholic Church a Plenary Indulgence is available each day from November 1-8 for Catholics who devoutly visit and pray for the departed in any cemetery. The usual conditions for a Plenary Indulgence apply: A plenary indulgence can be gained only once a day. In order to obtain it, the faithful must, in addition to being in the state of grace:

- have the interior disposition of complete detachment from sin, even venial sin;
- have made a sacramental confession of their sins;
- receive the Holy Eucharist;
- pray for the intentions of the Supreme Pontiff.

- 1) The Sacrament of Confession 20 days before or after the pious work of mercy or prayerful action;
- 2) Holy Communion received 20 days before or after the pious work of mercy or prayerful action;
- 3) Pray for the Holy Father as part of each Plenary Indulgence (Our Father and Hail Mary are suggested)

Suggested prayer for a visit to a cemetery: 'Eternal rest grant unto them O Lord; and let perpetual light shine upon them. May they rest in peace. Amen. May all the souls of the faithful departed rest in peace. Amen.
